SYNOPSIS OF STYLE
WITH A
LIST OF ABBREVIATIONS
FOR
SERIAL PUBLICATIONS
INDEXED IN THE
FOURTH SERIES
OF THE
INDEX - CATALOGUE *

To be a guide for medical research is the primary object of the Index-Catalogue. The Library, which issues it, and the Government which appropriates money for the expenses of this national institution and its publication, are fully aware of the international importance of this catalogue. In forty-nine volumes, on 46,768 pages, the Index-Catalogue lists almost two and one-half million books and journal articles related to medicine and allied sciences, which are published in many countries of the world. This vast amount of medical bibliographical material has accumulated chiefly during the last sixty years. Without a guide-book and without a proper classification of these literary products it is impossible for any medical research worker to penetrate his subject thoroughly or to avoid repetitions in his investigations.

To serve as an inventory for the Army Medical Library is the secondary aim of the Index-Catalogue. The Library has now grown up and has reached a point where it can easily consider itself the greatest center of documentation in the field of medicine, since all the two and one-half million journal articles and books listed in the Index-Catalogue are in its possession. With so great a treasure as a basis for its undertakings, the Library is now in a position to make further plans for the development of medical bibliography and reference work.

As an index to the medical literature, past and present, the Index-Catalogue refers to books and journals, to chapters in books and to articles in journals, the exact number of the volumes, parts and supplements of these publications, and, finally, to the pages on which the needed information is to be found. As a catalogue of the Library the Index-Catalogue lists books and pamphlets under the names of their respective authors, serial publications under the names of corporate bodies or under their titles, with the necessary collation and imprint. Both the Index and the Catalogue are arranged in a single alphabet of authors and subjects.

Its double purpose caused the Index-Catalogue to develop a style of its own for the cataloging of books, for the references to books and journals, and for the differentiation of that portion relating to cataloging from that devoted to references only. This is accomplished by various types of printing. Since 1880, when the very first volume of the Index-Catalogue was published, our ideas on book cataloging and bibliographical reference work have been changed considerably, and it was natural that the Index-Catalogue changed its style from time to time.

The following pages briefly describe the style of author entries and references, the arbitrary rules for making abbreviations for journal titles and for other single words, the use of numbers in dates and paginations, the punctuation, capital and small letters, and the style of printing of the Fourth Series of the Index-Catalogue.

The Synopsis of Style is followed by three lists: (1) Dictionary of abbreviated and contracted words; (2) Abbreviations of titles of serial publications; (3) Index to abbreviations of publications of corporate bodies. All three lists are alphabetically arranged. The dictionary contains the most commonly used abbreviated words occurring in the Index-Catalogue. It is intended to be for the use of the Library staff. The list of abbreviated titles includes all serial publications which have been current in the Library since 1919. Its purpose is solely to be an explanation of the abbreviated titles, and unnecessary data have been therefore omitted. The list shows the abbreviation, the short title of the corresponding journal, and the place of publication (or the place where the journal is entered as a second-class matter). The third list includes corporate bodies as authors, whose name is an intimate part of the journal title. The numbers in this list refer to the list of abbreviated titles in which the entries are numbered consecutively.

SYNOPSIS OF STYLE

1. Alphabetical and chronological arrangement.

All matter is arranged in alphabetical order. Authors, title entries, geographical names and subjects of the same name are arranged in the order mentioned. Hyphenated words, compound words, and compound proper names are treated as one word. Author names with names of joint authors are considered as one word. In title entries, articles, prepositions, and conjunctions are not taken into account in the alphabetical arrangement.

Several works of one author are chronologically arranged in the author entries with the exception that the works of authors dead before 1880 are alphabetized. "Opera omnia" precede editions of single works, and single works precede anthologies. Subsequent editions immediately follow the main entry in chronological order. They are printed in one paragraph. Translations are next, in new paragraphs beginning with the note "The same" and containing the translated title. In case of incunabula, or where the title of a subsequent edition greatly differs from the main entry, each edition is entered in a separate paragraph.

Under subject headings, the various divisions of the subject are in alphabetical order. Within a division, the book references are first alphabetized, each having a separate paragraph. Journal entries follow, arranged in a single paragraph in the alphabetical order of authors. Several articles of the same author are chronologically arranged, the oldest publication being listed first. Articles published in the same year by one author are printed in the alphabetical order of the journals.

2. Author entries.

Author entries begin with the family name of the author followed by the full Christian names, which are not abbreviated unless the full name could not be ascertained. Surnames with prefixes are treated according to the library method of the author's home country. In general, the French "de" without the article, and the German "von" are placed after the Christian names. Otherwise, the international rules of cataloging are observed. The author's name is occasionally followed by epithets or other necessary additions. The name proper, including the Christian names, is printed in the same style of type, and whenever it could be ascertained, the date of birth and death is added to the author's name, e. g., STANLEY, Sir Henry M[orton] 1875-1922.

Corporate bodies as authors are entered chiefly under names of countries, states, cities, towns, etc., when such geographical names (nouns or adjectives) form part of their titles, or when the corporate body is strictly bound to some locality. Internationally known institutions whose name begins with a proper noun (or adjective) are entered under the first word of their names. References are made for all other names by which the corporate body is known. If the name of an association or institution is not preceded by a geographical noun it is printed in (Case 130)† the first word capitalized throughout.

The author's name is followed by the list of his books lately acquired by the library. The title of a book is always given in the original language; if necessary, the English equivalent of the title is added in brackets. For books translated from foreign languages the original title of the work is added in brackets, if it could be ascertained. Particular care is taken to preserve the archaic forms in titles of old books.

The title of a book is followed by a statement specifying the edition, in the language of the book. The collation is in English in the following order: volumes, paging, illustrations, size. Paging is shown only for works of less than three volumes. Illustrations are counted in the following order: illustrations, plates, photographs, portraits, maps, plans, facsimiles, tables, diagrams. If there is but one portrait, plate or other matter included in the collation the number is omitted. The size, at present, is in the old style of designation by 8°, 4°, fol., etc. This will eventually be replaced by giving the height of book in centimeters.

The imprint follows the collation. It includes the place of publication given always in the vernacular, the name of the publisher, and the date. Abbreviations and omissions are made in the collation and imprint whenever feasible. In a separate paragraph, printed in 6-point, various notes are sometimes added, or the volumes of a serial publication are enumerated by their short titles and individual authors.

In all 8-point author entries additional editions of a publication by the same author are printed in the paragraph of the original work, with the exception specified under 1. The new edition is separated from the main entry by the word Also set in capital and small capital letters.

Under the name of an author, following the list of his works, but before his works with joint authors, references relating to his biography and literary activity are printed in a separate 6-point paragraph: books first, then the journal references preceded by a dash and the words "See also." The biographical paragraph is sometimes preceded by a separate 6-point paragraph of references to other author entries.

Book entries under subject headings differ but slightly from the main author entries. The author's name carries only the initials of the Christian name, the subtitle of the book being omitted. The edition as well as the volume, paging, and size are indicated. The illustrations and the name of the publisher are not mentioned. The name of the author (personal or corporate) or, in case of anonymous books and journals, the full title is printed in 8-point capitals and small capitals.

† This and similar expressions in the Synopsis of Style refer to the United States Government Printing Office Type Book (Washington, 1931). The bold-faced type used in the Index-Catalogue is known as "Century Bold". Case 129 of this type is 6-point, Case 130 8-point, Case 131 10-point.

4. References to books. A reference to a book contains all the parts of a subject book entry. If the reference is made from an author to the work of another author, it is introduced by a "See" or "See also." The reference is printed in a 6-point separate paragraph, with the initials of the author's Christian name in Roman letters, while the surname is in bold-face type. If the reference is made to chapters of a book under a subject heading, the author's name is given first, then the title of the chapter, the title of the book preceded by "In" and followed by the name of the author of the book in parenthesis, the statement of edition, place of publication, date, volume number followed by a colon, number of part or supplement, and pagination. If the author of the chapter and that of the book are the same an introductory "In his" before the title of the book is all that is needed. The title of the book may be shortened.

5. References to journal articles. A reference to a journal article contains the surname of the author with his initials and occasional prefixes, the full title of the article in the original or in translation, the abbreviated title of the journal or serial publication, the place of publication if necessary, the year, volume number in bold-face type followed by a colon, statements on parts or divisions of the journal, the pagination, and the number of illustrations. This may be followed by reference to discussion, to two other journals at which the article was published, and to reprints if they are available at the Library.

In articles published in a series, the subtitle of the series often differs greatly from the main title. Since the article is classified according to its subtitle, results of a serial investigation are widely scattered in the catalogue. If they happen to come under the same subheading, the main title is mentioned only once.

In general, titles in English, French, German, Spanish, and other Roman languages are given in original; others are usually translated. In transactions of societies the abbreviated title of the journal is immediately followed by the date of the meeting, if this is different from the date of publication. In subsequent references the title of the journal, the place, year and volume number may be omitted if they are the same as found in the preceding reference. The repetition is indicated by "Ibid."

6. Abbreviations, contractions, and omissions. References and author entries in a printed catalogue must necessarily have many words shortened by abbreviation, contraction, or omission. There are certain words and phrases frequently occurring in the collation, imprint, or journal references, which if printed in full, would needlessly encumber the catalogue. Economy also demands the use of shortened words and symbols.

Words can be shortened by abbreviation, contraction, and omission, the difference between them being that a contracted word always includes the first and the last letter of its original. Contracted words, therefore, do not need any period after them. "Ztg" is the contraction for "Zeitung"; "Bd" for "Board"; "Ergänzbd" for "Ergänzungsband"; "Cie" for "compagnie." Abbreviated words always carry a period, and contain only part of the first half of the original. Some of them are simple abbreviations; others are abbreviations combined with contractions. "Facs." is a simple abbreviation for "facsimile"; "ed." for "edition" or "editor" or "edited"; "Gior." for "Giornale". "Sitzber." is a contracted and abbreviated form of "Sitzungsberichte"; "Zschr." of "Zeitschrift". Omission is used to shorten names composed of several units; thus, the name of Rio de Janeiro is shortened to "Rio".

Not only words but consecutive numbers can be contracted in dates or in paginations as 1843-90; 1917-18; 1920-21; 10-2; 1996-9. Such contractions, however, are impossible in cases like 978-1002 or 1999-2000.

The general principle of shortening words is that the artificially created word should be selfexplanatory either alone or in its relations. Another rule which should govern the composition of shortened words for an international catalogue is that cognate words in all languages should be reduced to the same form, if this is possible with due consideration for the linguistic and orthographic characteristics of foreign words. International words are very common in medical nomenclature, and it is quite simple to reduce them, in the case of many languages, to their common root.

Some words can be abbreviated more than others without any misunderstanding. This depends upon the particular place in the catalogue where the abbreviation is used. Single-letter abbreviations are very clear in the collation of books, or at the head of short titles of journals. Where pagination or volume is expected, "p." or "v." are easily understood; where the word "Journal" is expected, "J." will be found entirely adequate.

Generally, the abbreviated word contains more than a single letter, and it usually ends with a consonant. No attention is paid to grammatical endings, suffixes, or signs of declination of a word. Abbreviations, therefore, are grammarless, and cannot be read without a certain knowledge of languages. Except in very rare cases, an abbreviation or contraction is used only for one word, and a word is abbreviated to the same short form.

7. Shortened titles of serial publications.

Titles of journals are shortened by abbreviation, contraction, or omission of words. The general principles of these methods are described under 6. The leading rule is to shorten the title only to such an extent that the country of publication is easily recognized without the addition of the place of publication; that the subject of the journal stands out; and that the journal cannot be confused with others. Geographical nouns occurring in the title of the journal are, therefore, not abbreviated except United States to "U. S.", United Kingdom to "U. K.", and the first half of compound geographical names as New York to N. York, or North Carolina to N. Carolina. These abbreviations differ from those used for names of cities as places of publication.

Certain journal titles are not abbreviated: (a) single-word titles, (b) titles in Asiatic languages unless such journals carry also an international title, (c) short titles consisting of 2 or 3 words in unusual relation to each other as in Animal Defender, or Contact Point.

The shortened title is made from the main title of the journal, except in periodicals for which a well-known short title is generally accepted. The abbreviated title maintains the same sequence of words as the original with the exception of words that can be omitted. In publications of corporate authors the abbreviated title usually begins with the generic name of the periodical regardless of its position on the title page of the serial publication.

Certain words are omitted from the shortened title. Conjunctions are generally disregarded, except in the few cases where they connect two equally important nouns of a title. Phrases equivalent to a genitive, unessential titular adjectives, nouns denoting administrative divisions, unless parts of a name, all prepositions, definite and indefinite articles are omitted. Long titles are curtailed, and the second half of the title is partly or entirely disregarded, especially if it consists of words expressing subjects closely related to the first part of the title. "Archives des maladies du coeur, des vaisseaux et du sang" is shortened to "Arch. mal. coeur". In periodicals with two or more generic names connected with a conjunction only the first of these names is included in the shortened title, e. g., "Acta et commentationes . . ." as "Acta"; "Bulletins et mémoires . . ." as "Bull."

8. Omission of the place of publication in journal references.

The two reasons of adding the place of publication to a shortened journal title in references are, (a) to recognize the country of origin and the language of the journal, (b) to avoid confusion with journals of an equal or very similar shortened title. When the journal title in its abbreviated form contains geographical nouns or adjectives, unique proper names, or words characteristic of a definite language, the place of publication is not added to the reference. The language of the journal can be sometimes easily recognized from the shortened title, and it is assumed that journals with English titles are published in the United States, those with Russian terms come from Russia, those with French words are printed in France, and so on. If a journal is published elsewhere than in the country which its language would reveal, or if the journal is the publication of a local society or a local corporation, the place of publication is added to the shortened title unless a geographical noun or adjective, or a unique proper word in the title makes the place of publication superfluous in the reference.

If the shortened title of a journal is readable in more than one language, if the origin of the journal is revealed only by a single accent of an abbreviated word, or if there are several journals with similar titles, the place of publication is added to the reference.

No place of publication is needed in references to journals with shortened titles like

Acta med. scand.,	J. Maine M. Ass.,
Am. J. Hyg.,	Med. iberica,
Arch. fr. belg. chir.,	Norsk mag. laegevid.,
Arch. fr. path. gén.,	Nurs. J. China,
Arch. ital. anat.,	Philippine J. Sc.,
Bol. As. méd. argent.,	Proc. Akad. wet. Amsterdam,
Bull. Soc. zool. France,	Pub. Colorado Coll.,
Bull. U. S. Nat. Mus.,	Rev. méd. Barcelona,
Deut. Mschr. Zahnk.,	România med., which all contain a geographical noun or adjective of the country or city where they are published.

The occurrence of a unique proper name makes the place of publication superfluous in references to journals like

Acta Soc. med. Duodecim,
Aichi J. Exp. M.,
Arch. Julius Klaus Stift.,
Bull. Moses Taylor Hosp.,
J. Ayurveda,
J. R. Army M. Corps,
Linacre Q.,
Sind M. J.,
Sudhoffs Arch., and similar others.

No place of publication is generally added to journal references beginning with Abh., Atti, Boll., Beitr., C. rend., Erg., Gazz., Gior., Rass., Riv., Wschr., Zbl., Zschr., Ztg or containing tschr., tskr., and other words characteristic of a definite language as

Abh. Geburtsh.,
Aerztl. Rdsch.,
Allatorv. lap.,
Année biol.,
Biol. Zbl.,
Borba s tuberk.,
Cas. lék. česk.,
Cervello,
Erdball,
Gazz. internaz. med. chir., and so on.

The place of publication is an important part of the reference to journals like

Acta aerophysiol., Hamb.,
Acta biol. exp., Warsz.,
Aerztl. Prax., Wien,
An. Direcc. san. nac., Caracas,
Ann. ocul., Par.,
Arch. biol., Genova,
Arch. M. Hydr., Lond.,
Bol. Asist. púb. nac., Montev.,
Bull. Soc. nat. chir., Par.,
Cellule, Louvain,
Dent. Bull., Wash.,
Fol. med., Nap.,
Fed. Counc. Bull., N. Y.,

Heart, Lond.,
Hyg. scol., Par.,
J. Med., Cincin.,
J. Psychol. Neur., Lpz.,
J. psikhol. nevr., Moskva,
Jap. Zschr. Naturwiss., Jena,
Kyklos, Lpz.,
Progr. méd., Par.,
Progr. Med., Phila.,
Rass. mens., Tor.,
Rev. méd., Par.,
Rev. méd., Puebla, and so on.

9. Capitalization. In author entries, the surname of the author is in capital letters. In compound names of authors not connected with a hyphen and in title entries only the first word is fully capitalized. Capitalization of other words follows the custom of the various countries; thus, German nouns are capitalized. In capitalization of botanical and zoological terms the international rules are observed.

In journal references the abbreviated words are always capitalized for short titles of journals in the English language. In German abbreviated journal titles the nouns are capitalized. In other languages only the first word, single-letter abbreviations, personal and geographical nouns, and the first word of the name of a corporate author are capitalized. Abbreviations for places of publication are printed in capital letters.

10. Punctuation. Double punctuation is avoided as much as possible, and a bracket or parenthesis, where it occurs, will eliminate a comma or semicolon, even a period, where this is not a sign of abbreviation.

In author entries a comma separates the surname or initial from the Christian name, the Christian name from the epithet, the epithet from the date, the Roman numbers from the Arabic numerals in the collation, the place of publication from the publisher's name, and the publisher from the date of the imprint. In case of joint authors the comma is used for separation except before an ampersand (&) preceded by a surname when the Christian name is omitted or preceded by a dash. In journal references the title of the journal, the place of publication, the year and the volume are separated from each other by commas.

The period is used after all abbreviations, but not after contractions. It separates the name of the author, or authors, from the title unless the author's name is followed by the year of birth alone with a dash. In such cases a 3-em quad is between the dash and the book title. The title of a publication is usually followed by a period, sometimes by a question mark. A period shows the end of the entry or of the reference.

The semicolon is used before subtitles, between different paginations or paginations of different volumes. A semicolon separates statements as to foreword, commentaries, etc., from the book title proper. The colon is used after volume numbers in references, and, like the number itself, is printed in bold-face type. Parentheses are used wherever they occur in the original title of a publication. Also the name of an author is in parentheses when it occurs after the title of a book in references. Brackets are used, either in the title or in the references, for matter supplied by the Library. In subject headings brackets include synonyms and other matter related to the heading. Hyphens are omitted from French Christian names, and capital letters are not accented in any language.

11. Dashes.

To avoid repetition of names, a 2-em dash is used for author or authors in 8-point text, and a 3-em dash in the 6-point paragraph, if the authors are the same as in the preceding entry; an end-dash is used to connect different numbers in references and dates. If any change occurs in the names of the next entry, all author names are repeated, unless the name of a joint-author can be added to the dash with an ampersand (&) sign.

A flush 2-em half-blunt dash is used before subdivisions of subjects. It replaces the main heading of the subject. A 3-em dash separates different editions of the same work printed in one paragraph with the main entry. An em dash is used to separate journal entries; this dash should never begin a line.

12. Type, indentions, leads, quads.

Subject headings and author names in author entries beginning a column are set in 10-point (Case 131) capitals, flush in the folio line above each column. This is also done where a subject or the works of an author continue from the preceding column. Subject headings are set flush, first word in 10-point (Case 131) capitals; subheadings are set in 8-point (Case 130) and overruns are indented 1-em. In author entries or when the subject is a person's name, the name is set in 8-point (Case 130) with a 1-em indention. Excepting subject headings, everything else is set in shorter or longer paragraphs, 16-pica measure. Paragraph indentions are 1-em.

If the biographical date of an author-entry contains only the year of birth, a 3-em quad is placed after the dash and before the title of the book. When this occurs with the first of joint authors, a 2-em quad will be used in place of the missing date. A 2-em quad replaces also the missing date of birth when only the year of death is given.

A 6-point slug above, and a 2-point lead below flush headings and 8-point (Case 130) subheadings are used. No lead is needed after "See also" references. Six-point annotations are separated from 6-point journal entries by a 2-point lead, which is used also when a 6-point paragraph is followed by 8-point text.

The abbreviations "p." (page) and "v." (volume) always bump with figures they precede or follow. The volume numbers are set in bold-face type in all cases. Roman numbers when they indicate volumes are changed into Arabic numerals.

13. Transliteration of names in Slavic letters.

Various reasons make it necessary to transliterate names of authors and journals in Slavic characters as simply as possible. Therefore, the use of diacritical marks is entirely avoided, and no attempt is made toward a graphical transcription of the many shades of Slavic pronunciation. In general, the rules of the United States Geographical Board are followed with the exception that both И and Ы are transcribed as "i"; Ж as "zh", sometimes "j"; Ъ as "y"; Ю as "iu"; Я as "ia;" ИЙ as "y" in endings; and ИЯ as "ia". Names of non-Russian authors occurring in Russian journals are retransliterated to their original forms. Foreign transliterations of Russian names, especially those in French and German, are changed into English spelling, e. g., Tchebotarevitch(fr.), or Tschebotarewitsch(germ.) as Chebotarevich; Chicobaloff(fr.) or Schichobalow (germ.) as Shikhobalov.

* Since 1932, when the printing of the Fourth Series of the Index-Catalogue started, repeated attempts have been made to produce a list of abbreviations handy for both the Library and the Public Printer. The present list, the result of experience gained in editing and printing the first and second volumes, makes the abbreviations standard for future issues of the Index-Catalogue.
